Making it all easy.

We provide you with everything you need to integrate our cameras quickly and easily into your system: From proper accessories on to individual starter kits, you will obtain all that's necessary.

Matching accessories for your system.

There is more to an image processing system than just a camera: cables, PCI interface cards, filters, adapters and mountings or lenses. We help you to find the accessories that match your application and provide you with a comprehensive range of cross-interface accessories that are optimally harmonized. Since the system is only as reliable as its individual components, you can be sure our components underwent comprehensive testing and inspection – for long-term longevity and reliability in the image processing application.
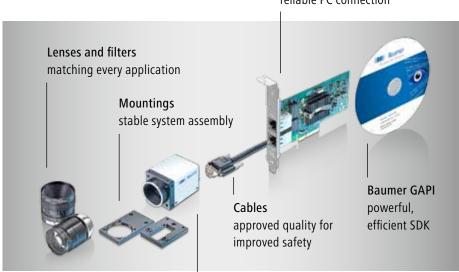

Starter Kits: Just unpack and go.

Our starter kits are individually compiled to match the related camera series and will support you in evaluating a camera. You can focus entirely on the solution while we provide you with everything required for set up – from cable to mountings on to software.
